

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased by 1.5 million (1990–1999) and is projected to increase by a further 1.5 million by 2010 (Office for National Statistics 2000).

There is a growing awareness of the need to develop strategies to meet the needs of the ageing population. The Department of Health (2000) has identified the need to develop a new paradigm of care for the ageing population, one that is based on the concept of 'active ageing'. This paradigm is based on the idea that ageing is a process, not a state, and that the goal of care should be to promote the health and well-being of older people, rather than to simply manage their decline. This paradigm is based on the idea that older people should be able to live independently, to participate in social activities, and to contribute to society.

The Department of Health (2000) has identified a number of key areas for action in order to achieve this paradigm. These include: (1) promoting the health and well-being of older people; (2) promoting the independence of older people; (3) promoting the participation of older people in social activities; and (4) promoting the contribution of older people to society. The Department of Health (2000) has also identified a number of key areas for research in order to achieve this paradigm. These include: (1) the health and well-being of older people; (2) the independence of older people; (3) the participation of older people in social activities; and (4) the contribution of older people to society.

The Department of Health (2000) has also identified a number of key areas for action in order to achieve this paradigm. These include: (1) promoting the health and well-being of older people; (2) promoting the independence of older people; (3) promoting the participation of older people in social activities; and (4) promoting the contribution of older people to society. The Department of Health (2000) has also identified a number of key areas for research in order to achieve this paradigm. These include: (1) the health and well-being of older people; (2) the independence of older people; (3) the participation of older people in social activities; and (4) the contribution of older people to society.

The Department of Health (2000) has also identified a number of key areas for action in order to achieve this paradigm. These include: (1) promoting the health and well-being of older people; (2) promoting the independence of older people; (3) promoting the participation of older people in social activities; and (4) promoting the contribution of older people to society. The Department of Health (2000) has also identified a number of key areas for research in order to achieve this paradigm. These include: (1) the health and well-being of older people; (2) the independence of older people; (3) the participation of older people in social activities; and (4) the contribution of older people to society.

The Department of Health (2000) has also identified a number of key areas for action in order to achieve this paradigm. These include: (1) promoting the health and well-being of older people; (2) promoting the independence of older people; (3) promoting the participation of older people in social activities; and (4) promoting the contribution of older people to society. The Department of Health (2000) has also identified a number of key areas for research in order to achieve this paradigm. These include: (1) the health and well-being of older people; (2) the independence of older people; (3) the participation of older people in social activities; and (4) the contribution of older people to society.

The Department of Health (2000) has also identified a number of key areas for action in order to achieve this paradigm. These include: (1) promoting the health and well-being of older people; (2) promoting the independence of older people; (3) promoting the participation of older people in social activities; and (4) promoting the contribution of older people to society. The Department of Health (2000) has also identified a number of key areas for research in order to achieve this paradigm. These include: (1) the health and well-being of older people; (2) the independence of older people; (3) the participation of older people in social activities; and (4) the contribution of older people to society.

The Department of Health (2000) has also identified a number of key areas for action in order to achieve this paradigm. These include: (1) promoting the health and well-being of older people; (2) promoting the independence of older people; (3) promoting the participation of older people in social activities; and (4) promoting the contribution of older people to society. The Department of Health (2000) has also identified a number of key areas for research in order to achieve this paradigm. These include: (1) the health and well-being of older people; (2) the independence of older people; (3) the participation of older people in social activities; and (4) the contribution of older people to society.

BUYERS - Get the Latest Spanish Properties sent Direct to your Inbox

ESTATE AGENTS - Advertise Unlimited Spanish Properties With Us

BUSINESSES - Advertise your Products & Services

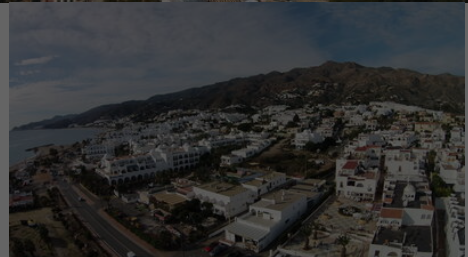

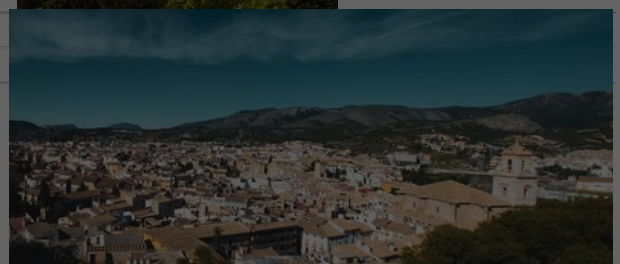

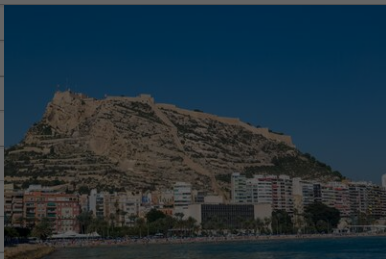

PRIVATE SELLERS - Sell your Property Direct or via our Agents

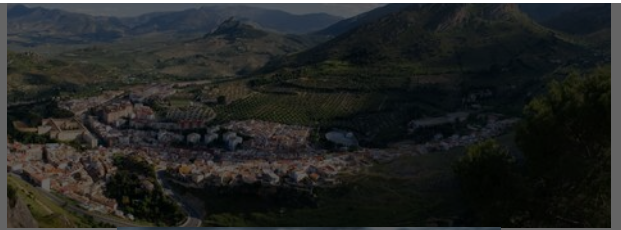

Featured Properties For Sale in Spain

Your Best Choice to find Properties for Sale or Rent in Spain

More Spanish Properties For Sale in These Provinces

Estate Agents in Spain

Popular Locations in Spain

More Featured Properties For Sale in Spain

Spanske ejendomsnyheder og opdateringer fra Spain Property Portal.com

1234567890

1234567890

1234567890

Spain Property Portal

Populære søgninger

hurtige links