This reformed detached villa sits on a large plot of 800m² in a prime location in Ciudad Quesada. Internally the main floor of the house has a huge lounge and diner, a separate kitchen, family shower room and two bedrooms. The underbuild has another huge bedroom with space to create a self-contained annex. There is also a sizable garage for added storage. With plenty of terraces and a private swimming pool, there is loads of space to enjoy the Mediterranean climate. The main commercial area of Ciudad Quesada is a 15 minute downhill walk and the nearest bars and restaurants can be found at the country club, which is a five minute walk. With a population of around thirteen thousand, Ciudad Quesada is situated in the Southeastern part of the Valencian region within the province of Alicante. Founded as an urbanisation in the 1970s by local entrepreneur Justo Quesada, Ciudad Quesada is now one of the most vibrant and well-known towns in the South of the Alicante province. A large part of Ciudad Quesada's success is down to its location; it's forty minutes by car from Alicante city centre, thirty from El Altet airport, about an hour from Murcia's new Corvera airport and is serviced by the Mediterranean Motorway, the AP-7, which stretches the length of Spain's Mediterranean coast. The regional capital, Valencia, is approximately two and a half hours away by car, whilst Murcia city centre is somewhat closer and can be reached in about forty-five to fifty minutes. As one may expect, Ciudad Quesada is something of a cultural melting pot in almost every aspect of its existence. Local business is no exception; the British, Irish, Dutch, Belgian, German and Scandinavian populations are represented in many of the local businesses such as restaurants, bars, hair and beauty salons, gyms, estate agencies, legal firms, furniture stores, builders, electricians, butchers, bakers and yes, probably candlestick makers! Over the past few years, Ciudad Quesada and the surrounding towns have seen massive investment in their infrastructure. As recently as summer 2020, an extensive project to re-modernise Avenida de las Naciones (effectively Ciudad Quesada's "High Street") was completed making the area even more accessible to tourists and locals alike as well as improving things for local businesses. Other very recent projects have included the
