Los Almagros is a charming small rural village (pedanía) of the Fuente Álamo de Murcia municipality in southeastern Spain, with around ~200–270 residents and a relaxed countryside atmosphere. It lies at the foot of the Sierra de Carrascoy amid scenic landscapes and agricultural fields, making it ideal for those who enjoy rural living close to nature. Despite its peaceful rural charm, the village is conveniently located just a few minutes from the Campo de Cartagena motorway, linking it easily with Cartagena, Murcia, and the wider region.
