43.000€

We are pleased to present this charming and characterful townhouse located in the popular town of Martos, in Jaén Province. Full of traditional features and spread over three floors, the property offers generous living space and excellent potential for a comfortable home in southern Spain.

The house benefits from a recently replaced roof and updated electrical system, providing a solid base for the next owner. While the property would benefit from some cosmetic improvements such as painting and decorating, it already offers a wonderful blend of space, character and traditional Andalusian charm.

On the ground floor, there is a welcoming entrance room and stairs leading up to the main living accommodation. This is a useful storage area, ideal for bicycles, or general household items.

The first floor features a large and welcoming living room with a traditional fireplace, creating a cosy focal point for the space. Also on this level are a bathroom and a kitchen, offering a practical layout for everyday living.

On the second floor, you will find two good-sized bedrooms along with access out to a private patio area, providing a pleasant outdoor space for relaxing, enjoying a morning coffee or adding plants and greenery.

The third floor offers two further spacious bedrooms, along with access to the roof terrace, where you can enjoy views across the surrounding rooftops and take advantage of the warm Andalusian sunshine.

One of the highlights of this property is the traditional character throughout, including exposed stone walls and attractive wooden ceiling beams, which give the home a warm and authentic feel.

With some light updating, this property could easily be transformed into a charming permanent residence, holiday home or rental property.
