The area is home to El Limonar International School, an international school that teaches in both Spanish and English. The construction of Villamartin started in 1972 and is now features numerous family-friendly attractions, from golf to watersports and go-cart tracks. Villamartin Plaza The major attraction for both domestic and non-domestic tourism is the climate, as Villamartin has some 300 days of sunshine and a 20°C average annual temperature, as well as the number of large beaches located in the area which were awarded the European Blue Flag for cleanliness, safety and the provision of facilities for the whole family. The area has two championship golf courses; Campo de Golf Villamartin, which was home to the 1994 Mediterranean Open, and Campo de Golf Las Ramblas. There are also a number of other courses in the near surrounding area. The urbanisation of Villamartin is known for its
