Palma is the capital of Mallorca and one of the most popular summer and winter short break destinations in Europe. The city is divided into five districts, and also administers the island of Cabrera which is a marine reserve of international importance. The former fishing barrio of Santa Catalina in Palma de Mallorca is a hip enclave centred on a centuries old market piled with local produce. Leafy streets lined by gaily painted cottages and art nouveau mansions are packed with design boutiques and vintage stores. Martini lounges and music cafes sit alongside dive bars popular with a bohemian crowd, while trendy restaurants serving global cuisines occupy squares and backstreet alleys. Santa Catalina is a few minutes' walk from both Palma de Mallorca's waterfront and port and the city centre so it's become one of the most popular districts in the city for those that want to live the urban lifestyle in a Mediterranean Island.
