The town of Javea is located a 2-minute drive from the major tourist centre of Benidorm. The city centre has not changed at all over the past centuries. Here, like many years ago, old churches rise, houses are abundantly "sown" with iron balconies and pots of geraniums. And in the port, in addition to fishing boats and slender yachts, you can find many good restaurants and bars. The Spaniards call this city "the dawn of Spain", as the "cabo de la Nao", on which Javea is located, is the easternmost point in the country and the locals are the first in Spain to meet the dawn. Thanks to the well-developed infrastructure and excellent quality of roads, you can quickly and easily reach the international airport, the capital of the province, the city of Alicante, as well as other major cultural and historical centres of the Costa Blanca.
