Sucina is a small village located in the region of Murcia, in southeastern Spain. It is situated in the province of Murcia and is known for its beautiful landscapes and traditional Spanish charm. Sucina is surrounded by agricultural fields, particularly lemon and olive groves, giving it a tranquil and rural atmosphere.

Sucina is becoming increasingly popular with tourists and expatriates due to its proximity to various golf courses and the Mar Menor, a large coastal lagoon known for its warm and shallow waters.

The village itself offers some basic amenities like shops, restaurants, and bars, but it is primarily known as a peaceful destination for those seeking a more relaxed and traditional Spanish experience. The region's climate is generally warm and dry, making it an appealing location for outdoor activities and leisure.
